THE FINEST ON EARTH

feel prostrated as you do even in the northern cities in this country. I have suffered much more from the heat of New York and Chicago than I have ever suffered from the heat of Phoenix. The nights are free of that stifling heat of the east or of any country where the humidity is great. "Yes, sir, sum it all up from an experience of much travel and I tell you Phoenix and the Salt River valley has the finest climate to be found on the globe."

FRESH FROM THE BLIZZARDS.

George M. Walker G. ad to Get Back to the Land of Sunshine.

George M. Walker, who was manager of the Hotel Adams last winter and returned here Saturday evening from Denver to again assume the management of that hotel, when asked yesterday if he was glad to return to the sun-kissed land, said:

"Yes, sir, I am indeed glad to return to the balmy winter climate of Phoenix. I left Denver last Thursday, the weather there that day having moderated a little from what it had been for sixteen days without a break. For these sixteen days the thermometer had ranged from a few degrees below zero to 27 below. The very oldest inhabitant, every one, declared that this winter was without an equal in the history of Colorado. Snow has fallen in the mountains every day since the cold began and Thursday the fall was the very worst of all. The Rio Grande and the Colorado Midland had managed to open their lines to Leadville by Wednesday, but Thursday's storm blocked them worse than ever and some of the officials of these lines told me they did not know now when they would be able to get trains through again. The suffering in the mountain towns has been terrible and now starvation is staring many of the people in the face.

"The people on the through train which I caught at Trinidad, Friday, had an awful experience coming across Kansas and eastern Colorado. The cold wave struck them on the Kansas plains Thursday and the water pipes and steam heating pipes of the cars froze up. It was simply impossible to force the steam through the pipes hot enough to keep it from condensing and freezing. The result was the pipes froze and burst, and in trying to thaw them out the cars were flooded; ice formed on the floors of the cars, making them colder than before. The railroad men did everything they could to make people as comfortable as possible, but in face of the conditions they were practically helpless and the passengers nearly froze to death. It was an awful trip.

"I tell you this seems like paradise to get down here into the warm sunshine and balmy air of the Salt River valley. One needs to have an experience with blizzards to fully appreciate it."

BURIED IN AN AVALANCHE.

These Things Don't Happen Here in the Salt River Valley.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 12.—The Times special from Silver Plume, Colo., says: "An avalanche of earth and snow swept down Cherokee Gulch today carrying away a dozen cabins and burying twenty-five Italian miners, including women and two children, all of whom were caught in their cabins. A force of 400 men immediately set to work to rescue them.

The slide started two miles away and came with terrific force, carrying along huge boulders and immense trees. A short distance from the starting point the avalanche parted, one section coming down Cherokee Gulch, taking with it two cabins occupied by Italians, and the shaft house of the Cary-City mine. The other section came down Wilhoit Gulch between the Pelican and Seven Thirty mines. The latter did the most damage.

Settlements of miners, mostly Italians, were situated in both gulches. For a week or more the inhabitants moved from place to place to escape threatened disaster should the mountain of snow start down the mountain side. Some lingered in their homes and were carried away in the slide today. It is estimated that thirteen bodies are still buried beneath the piles of snow in the two gulches. Eleven have been taken out dead, two of which are identified as the wife of Dominico Desfanti and her babe.

SMALLPOX AT JEROME.

The Camp Threatened by the Indifference of Officials.

Drs. Wood and Carrier have pronounced Charles Hall's case of fever to be nothing more nor less than a well defined case of smallpox, says the Reporter. Hall, who is well known among the sporting class here, is confined to a room in the house of ill-fame known as the Red Light. The doctors rendered their decision Monday morning and hung out the danger signal, ordering the inmates to remain indoors, and the house to be quarantined. The news of Hall's condition spread rapidly and it was but a short time until a large number of his friends had gained admission to his room.

The second case is that of Andy J. Murray, who has been employed at the works for some time. He was caught at the railroad station trying to make his way to Prescott, but was refused transportation over the road. Murray had a handkerchief tied over the lower part of his face partly concealing his inflamed face. In this way he succeeded in gaining passage in a hack loaded with passengers to the station, and had no trouble in securing a ticket. His condition was only learned after he had entered the coach with other passengers. The railroad officials declined to carry him and he returned to his room. Medical attention was at once rendered him and steps taken to prevent further exposure. Tuesday afternoon Murray consented to be moved to the pest house, where he is now receiving the best of medical attention at the hands of trained nurses.

Later—At 2 o'clock this (Thursday) morning Hall died, after undergoing horrible agonies.

During the early stage of his illness he slept with two or three boon companions, who are now mingling among the people of Jerome.

The indifference shown by officials is something unheard of. The body of Hall has been viewed by a number of females, who were permitted to disregard the "pronounced" quarantine supposed to have been thrown around the building.

If more energetic measures are not taken at once to control the spread of this disease in Jerome the result will be far-reaching and appalling. Local officials are utterly unable to cope with the contagion. County officials are chafing at little regard for the welfare of Jerome in this matter as they do in everything else. It is the board of supervisors' duty to act promptly and with sufficient force to meet sanitary regulations. It was deemed best to move Hall to the pest house and prevent the public from being needlessly exposed to the disease, but up to his refusal to go willingly, he was permitted to remain in his room—a semblance of a quarantine being all there was to protect the public. Officials should understand their duties better than to be deterred from doing what must appear to all to be an urgent necessity. That the will of one individual should jeopardize the health of a whole community is without reason or sanction of law.
